Tom Turkey

Fun Facts

Turkey Terms

- Tom or Gobbler - a male turkey.
- Hen - a female turkey.
- Poult - a baby turkey.
- Caruncle - colored growths on the throat region.
- Snood or "dew bill" - the flap of skin that hangs over the turkey's beak.
- Wattle - the flap of skin under the turkey's chin.
- Snood, Wattle and Caruncle Turn bright red when the turkey is upset or during courtship.
- Gizzard - part of a bird's stomach that contains tiny stones helping them grind food for digestion.

Turkey Tails

- Each spring Tom Turkeys try to befriend as many females as possible. Gobblers puff up their bodies and spread their tail feathers.
- Toms grunt, make a "gobble gobble" sound and strut about shaking their feathers. This fancy turkey trot helps the male attract Hens for mating.
- Wild turkeys (Meleagris gallopavo) live in woods in parts of North America and are the largest game birds found in this part of the world. They spend their days foraging for acorns, seeds, small insects and wild berries. They spend their nights in low branches of trees (yes, wild turkeys can fly!).
- The Hen nests under bushes in the woods, incubating up to 18 tan and speckled brown eggs at a time. It takes up to a month for the eggs to hatch. The hatchlings flock with their mother all year. For the first two weeks they are unable to fly. The mother roosts on the ground with them during this time.
- Wild turkeys are covered with dark feathers that help them blend in with their woodland homes.

Dear Parents,

The clocks have gone back and the nights are drawing in. Fall colors are everywhere! Birds are flying south and squirrels are furiously gathering nuts for the cold months ahead. Winter visitors are starting to appear. Who will visit your garden?

Turkeys, Octopus and North America

AUTUMN WORKS

It's octopuses (invertebrate of the month) and turkeys, of course, Gobble Gobble! (vertebrate of the month).

We'll be studying North America this month.

North America covers an area of about 9,540,000 square miles, about 4.8% of the planet's surface or about 16.5% of its land area. In 2013, its population was estimated at nearly 579 million people in 23 independent states, or about 7.5% of the world's population, if nearby islands (most notably the Caribbean) are included. It is the third-largest continent in area, following Asia and Africa, and the fourth in population after Asia, Africa, and Europe.

We'll also be studying customs, food, and manners of the North Americans.
